So you've set up your store, and you're ready to recover those abandoned carts. Great! But now you're staring at a blank email template thinking, "What do I actually write?" Don't worry, we've got you. Writing abandoned cart recovery email sequences can feel like a chore, especially when you're just starting out.

The good news? You don't need to be a copywriting genius. This starter pack gives you simple, proven templates you can customize and use right away to start bringing customers back and recovering lost sales.

01 Why Email Sequences Matter for Cart Recovery

Before we dive into the templates, let's clarify why you need a sequence instead of just one email. Research shows that sending multiple abandoned cart recovery email messages (typically 2–3) converts way better than sending just one. Each email serves a different purpose and catches customers at different stages of their decision-making process.

Think of it like this: the first email is a gentle reminder, the second builds confidence, and the third gives them a reason to act now. Together, they create a persuasive story that brings shoppers back.

02 Template #1: The Friendly Reminder (Send 1 Hour After Abandonment)

Subject Line Options:

- "Did you forget something?"
- "You left items in your cart"
- "Still interested? Your cart is waiting"

Email Body:

Hi [First Name],

We noticed you left some items in your cart. No worries, we saved everything for you!

Need help with your order? Just reply to this email, we're here to help!

Best, [Your Store Name]

Why This Works: This abandoned cart recovery email is short, friendly, and non-pushy. You're simply reminding them without any pressure. The product image acts as a visual trigger that reignites their interest.

03 Template #2: The Value Builder (Send 24 Hours Later)

Subject Line Options:

- "Still thinking it over?"
- "Here's why customers love [Product Name]"
- "Your cart is waiting (and here's why it's worth it)"

Email Body:

Hi [First Name],

We noticed you haven't completed your purchase yet. We totally understand—buying online means you want to be sure you're making the right choice.

P.S. We offer free returns within 30 days. Zero risk!

Why This Works: This abandoned cart recovery email addresses hesitation by reinforcing value. You're giving them reasons to feel confident about buying, using social proof and highlighting benefits they might have missed.

04 Template #3: The Final Nudge (Send 48-72 Hours Later)

Subject Line Options:

- "Last chance: Your cart expires soon"
- "We saved you 10% on your cart"
- "Don't miss out on [Product Name]"

Email Body:

Hi [First Name],

This is your last reminder! We've been holding your cart, but we can only save it for so long.

This offer expires in 24 hours, so grab it while you can!

Best, [Your Store Name]

Why This Works: This final abandoned cart recovery email creates urgency and sweetens the deal with an incentive. The countdown adds a gentle push without being aggressive.

05 Customization Tips for Your Templates

These templates are starting points, not rigid rules. Here's how to make them work for your specific store:

Match Your Brand Voice: If you're selling luxury jewelry, keep it elegant and refined. Selling skateboard gear? Keep it casual and fun. Your abandoned cart recovery email should sound like your brand.

Add Relevant Details: Include your shipping policy, return guarantees, or security badges if those were concerns that might have caused the abandonment in the first place.

Test Different Approaches: Try different subject lines, send times, and discount amounts. What works for one store might not work for another, so pay attention to your open rates and conversion numbers.

Mobile-Optimize Everything: Most people check email on their phones, so make sure your templates look good on small screens. Keep your copy short and your buttons big enough to tap easily.

06 When to Skip the Discount

Here's a pro tip: you don't always need to offer a discount in your third email. If you sell high-value or unique products, try emphasizing scarcity instead: "Only 2 left in stock" or "This style is selling fast." Save discounts for competitive markets where price matters more.

07 Quick Setup Checklist

Ready to implement these abandoned cart recovery email templates? Here's your action plan:

- Choose your email marketing tool or use your platform's built-in features
- Copy and customize these templates to match your brand voice
- Set up automation triggers (1 hour, 24 hours, 48–72 hours)
- Add your product images and store details
- Test the emails by abandoning a cart yourself
- Monitor your recovery rates and adjust as needed
